

Laboratory 1: Personal Introduction Micro-Presentation Using Canva

Short Reflection

In creating my personal introduction presentation using Canva, I found contrast to be the most helpful design principle because it made my slides clearer and easier to read. The easiest part of Canva was using the templates and dragging elements into place. It was simple to add text, pictures, and shapes without getting confused. The hardest part was deciding which colors and fonts to use together. Through this experience, I learned that visual communication is about clearly sharing ideas using simple and organized visuals. I realized that good design helps the audience understand the message faster and keeps the presentation more effective and engaging.
