III. Comparison Table

Criteria	Gemini (LLM #1)	Recraft (LLM #2)
Structure	Strong, well-organized layout with clear hierarchy; includes profile, competencies, and detailed experience sections. Better flow of information.	Simple and linear structure; sections are clearly separated but somewhat basic. Lacks a professional summary and detailed hierarchy.
Clarity	Highly clear with detailed descriptions; bullet points provide context and measurable responsibilities. More informative overall.	Easy to read at a glance, but the content is minimal and somewhat repetitive (e.g., duplicated role title). Less descriptive bullet points.
Formatting	Visually engaging with a sidebar, balanced spacing, and strong typography. Better use of alignment, contrast, and section emphasis.	Clean and minimal, but plain. Limited visual distinction between sections. Less use of spacing and typography variation.
Overall Quality	More professional and polished; suitable for competitive applications with strong presentation and content depth.	Good for a basic or quick resume, but lacks depth and polish needed for competitive roles.

IV. Reflection

In this activity, the LLM that performed better was Gemini, as it produced a more polished and professional resume compared to Recraft. Gemini's output included a well-structured layout with clearly defined sections such as a professional profile, detailed experience descriptions, and core competencies. This made the resume more comprehensive and aligned with industry standards. In contrast, Recraft's version was simpler and cleaner but lacked depth, with minimal descriptions and some repetition, making it feel more like a draft than a finalized resume.

One of the main differences I observed was the level of detail and organization. Gemini provided stronger bullet points with action-oriented language and clearer explanations of responsibilities, while Recraft focused more on brevity and basic formatting. Additionally, Gemini used a more visually engaging layout with better hierarchy, whereas Recraft relied on a straightforward, minimal design.

In my final resume, I combined the strengths of both outputs. I retained the clean and readable structure from Recraft but incorporated the detailed descriptions and professional tone from Gemini. I also improved consistency, removed redundancies, and refined my experience to better highlight my skills and contributions.

From this activity, I learned that prompting plays a crucial role in the quality of outputs. Specific and detailed prompts lead to more refined and useful results. It also showed me the importance of iterating and refining prompts to achieve a more tailored and professional outcome.
